

REGAL SHOES FOR WOMEN

Won't you call Monday and see just what "Regal" 1912 shoe creations are. Descriptions are but lame efforts in type—pictures however well drawn fall sadly short of portraying the real beauty of Regal shoes. You must see the Regal styles for Spring—slip your feet into them—be your own authority for their merit. Looks are as far as you need concern yourself. Quality and serviceability are inseparable companions of Regal styles.

COLONIALS, PUMPS and OXFORDS

Priced $1.50 to $4.00

Patent leather, suede, tan Russia, black calf, black kid and the new buckskins are represented. From this varied assortment it is a simple matter to select the two or three pairs necessary to complete your spring outfit.

Easter Souvenirs

To each child (accompanied by parents) visiting our store next week we will give a "wild cat whistle" the very latest novelty.

Parties

Mrs. Thomas H. Francis entertained on Thursday afternoon at her home, 1612 Noble street, in honor of her mother, Mrs. M. C. Hardin, it being her birthday anniversary. The afternoon was spent with sewing, and a guessing contest of articles found in "grandmother's" basket proved very enjoyable. Miss Pearl Swain and Mrs. George Atken received the honors. Another very original contest, planned by the hostess, was won by Mrs. W. W. Bailey and Mrs. Katherine E. Franklin.

grandmother Hardin cutting first, being followed by others who expressed her many well wishes. Those present were: Mesdames M. C. Hardin, Fred Wright, W. W. Bailey, J. P. O'Connor, George H. Atken, Harry Powers, W. H. Forbes, C. S. Woodworth, C. B. Patterson, J. J. Ayers, K. R. Franklin, Frank Powers, George Phillips, Jennie Swain, H. W. Blum, William Sachs, T. R. Francis, and Misses Pearl Swain and Margaret Walsh.

Mrs. W. U. Carre entertained at her home, 1612 East Rio Grande street, Wednesday afternoon, in honor of her sister, Miss Alice Carre, who has just returned from Alabama, a few of the latter's intimate friends.

What Constitutes Real Service In the Optical Business?

Certainly not merely the mechanical handling of the business, however prompt and efficient.

OUR own conception of real service embraces FAIR DEALING, COURTESY, HONEST GOODS and HONEST PROFITS. In the fitting and manufacturing of glasses we intend that our work shall always be mechanically perfect.

But we are also ambitious to create a feeling of absolute confidence among our customers that they will receive from us FAIR DEALING, COURTESY, HONEST GOODS, and pay us only an HONEST PROFIT.

The Turkey Trot---And Other Dances

By "THE GENTLEWOMAN"

MANNERS which rouse the indignation of even the not too straight-laced hostesses of New York, can hardly be allowed to become prevalent without strong opposition, so that it is with satisfaction and without surprise that I have noticed the various protests recently made against the new dances. It is to be hoped that all hostesses during the coming season will set their faces against these unpleasant critics, which should be relegated to "Bohemia" or sent back to the places that claim the dubious honor of having invented them.

While inveighing against the "Bunny Hug" and their ilk, however, I wish to make it clear that I have no prejudice against new dances merely because they are new. Most dancing people recognize the superiority of the one-step over the old two-step when it is danced by couples with a real sense of rhythm who eschew any exaggerated "swaying."

And one can have no sympathy with those who lament the departure of the old "country hop" style of waiting done to the full time, because this means very often that they have been unable to get into the apparently simple but really very tricky "Boston" one of whose charms is that the dancing master can teach it. I fully appreciate the attractions of the Boston when danced smoothly and to the music, though necessarily very often not in time with it. Indeed, I think that fashions in dancing must change like fashions in everything else, and that nothing is more delightful than the thing of the moment. But it is most important that it should be the real thing.

Without, therefore, being at all bigoted on the subject, I do most strongly deplore the barely decent stage tricks in which certain dancing men who ought to know better are now indulging. These "dances" (so called) are in everything else, and in the various dancing clubs which are frequented by the women from the musical comedy and music hall stages, it would be absurdly straight-laced to object to freak dances being seen at these clubs, where they are nearly always at least well done in their way. But that the men who dance them there should teach them to their sisters and relatives and expect to indulge in them at private subscription dances and in private houses, seems to me a breach of manners which ought not to be tolerated by hostesses. The critics I particularly refer to are all the exaggerated forms of the one-step, such as the "Bunny Hug" and "Turkey Trot" (these very names betray them) and such objectionable variations of the waltz as the French Double Boston and what is I believe known as the "Vague Waltz." The "no-clasp" waltz is too difficult to be very dangerous.

If all women who give dances would agree to be inflexible in discountenancing these unpleasant and vulgar innovations, I feel sure that not only would it be for the good of dancing generally, but that a distinct danger to young people would be removed.

Corset Demonstration. An Interesting Feature at "The White House" Next Week is a Demonstration of Redfern and Warner's Corsets.

While Easter gowns and hats are uppermost in the feminine mind at present, the corset is not to be overlooked in arranging their annual Easter Sale the management at "The White House" included a most interesting feature. This is a demonstration by Miss Lewis, one of the best corset women in the country, of Redfern and Warner's corsets. The services of Miss Lewis are at the disposal of patrons at "The White House" next week. When selecting the Easter gown and hat it will be a good idea to take Miss Lewis into consideration.
